Dear Ms. Henney,

I am writing to show my support of the legal petition by the Center for Food Safety. Genetically-engineered foods have no mechanism to monitor them, which means there is a risk of increased allergies and other potential health problems from these foods. To address the concerns of consumers the FDA should require new foods and products with genetically-engineered ingredients not be released to the market until there is safety testing for genetically-engineered foods before they reach the market. Further all genetically-engineered foods should be
